Set in a hospital common room at Christmas time, the play focuses on a self-important neurologist, Dr Mortimore. He is just about to give the lecture of his career (with a knighthood depending on it) when he finds himself pelted with the surprise fruit of a misspent youth. A former nurse bursts in with the news that not only is Mortimore the father of an 18-year-old who is emotionally unbalanced and under arrest for drunk driving, but this child is now in reception buying for the long lost parent. 'If you're going to tell a lie, tell a whopper' is Mortimore's credo and in the spiraling chaos of deceit, false identity and manic cover-up that ensues, he certainly acts on this principle. This cascading farce of conflicting fictions will keep you on the edge of your seat; it's the sort of fun you won't forget in a hurry!
